Biography – Sarah E. Bilofsky

Sarah E. Bilofsky currently directs public relations for Union Graduate College in Schenectady. She previously worked for Eric Mower and Associates in Albany, where her public affairs clients included Empire State Development, Ellis Hospital and New York State Health Facilities Association. An upstate New York native, Sarah also worked in Rhode Island, first serving as Finance Director for a Congressional campaign and then spokesperson for the American Red Cross, where she appeared on CNN, MSNBC and other national media outlets following The Station Nightclub fire in 2002. She then served as public relations director at (add)ventures, an advertising and public relations firm in Providence. Prior to RI, Sarah worked at Chelsea Piers in New York City, handling both public relations and special events. A graduate of Long Island University, she served as press secretary to former NYS Assemblyman Thomas P. DiNapoli (now State Comptroller). Sarah began her career as a reporter/anchor at WSYR in her hometown of Syracuse. She currently lives in Niskayuna, with her husband and daughter.
