

John Voight

John is the Director of Emergency Services for Ellis Hospital and has been in his current position for close to two years. Prior to his current role he was a Nursing Resource Specialist and liaison with the Information Technology department for the implementation of the Soarian Electronic Health Record. As Director of Emergency Services he is responsible for the oversight of both the Nott Street Emergency Department as well as the McClellan Campus Emergency Department. John has successfully integrated two hospital's emergency departments into one management structure and streamlined operations to provide better patient care, more timely, with improved efficiency. Currently he is working on design plans for the construction of a new Emergency Department. John is a Registered Nurse and attended the University of South Alabama and will begin his Masters of Nursing at Walden University in the fall. John also attended the Florida Police Academy in Pensacola, Florida. His past careers have been as a Police Officer, Soldier in the US Army, Heavy Equipment Operator, and a Staff Nurse in the Emergency Department.

John is a member of the American Nurses Association, Emergency Nurses Association, New York Emergency Nurses Association, and is the President-Elect of the Adirondack Emergency Nurses Association.

John was born and raised in Pensacola, Florida and moved to the Capital Region in 1998. He currently lives in North Greenbush, New York with his seven children. John and his family love to spend time together with friends and family.
